Andrea Varotto

Andrea Varotto is a contemporary visual artist whose work explores the relationship between nature, abstraction and inner perception. Through vibrant colour, layered movement and carefully structured compositions, she creates paintings that capture the energy of the natural world while also reflecting the emotional landscape of the human experience. Her work invites viewers to pause and reconnect with both nature and themselves, offering a space for contemplation within the complexity of modern life.

Born in Argentina, Varotto's career has developed through an unusual intersection of analytical and creative disciplines. Before fully dedicating herself to art, she trained as an industrial engineer at the University of Buenos Aires and later pursued postgraduate studies in marketing as well as an MBA at Fordham University in New York. This background in systems thinking and structure remains visible in her artistic process, where disciplined composition meets fluid gestural abstraction.

Her artistic development was shaped by study and mentorship at several respected institutions and studios. Varotto trained at the Art Students League of New York and worked with notable Argentine artists and mentors including Sergio Bazán, Manuel Amestoy and Agustina Núñez at Fundación Cazadores in Buenos Aires. Additional mentorship and artistic clinics with figures such as Ernesto Pesce and Ariel Mlynarzewicz further refined her practice.

Over the past decade her work has been exhibited internationally across galleries, museums and art fairs including exhibitions in Buenos Aires, Madrid, London and New York. Through these exhibitions Varotto has established a growing reputation for emotionally resonant abstract painting that bridges natural inspiration with contemporary visual language.

Varotto's work is sold primarily through the primary gallery market and international art fairs. Large-scale works from major series typically range between £4,000 and £9,500 depending on size and series. Her market presence is growing through international fairs and exhibitions across Europe and South America.

Andrea Varotto's current body of work centres on the dialogue between nature and the inner emotional world. Her paintings are abstract yet evocative, built through layered gestures, luminous colour and rhythmic structures suggesting landscapes, natural energy or organic movement. Rather than depicting nature directly, she translates sensations it provokes: light, atmosphere, stillness and motion, into painterly form.

Recent series such as Living Nature and The Outside, Inside explore the balance between external environment and internal experience. Fluid forms and expressive mark-making interact with underlying compositional structures, creating tension between order and spontaneity. The paintings appear both structured and instinctive, reflecting the artist's background in engineering and art.

Varotto works primarily with acrylic on canvas, often in large-scale compositions or diptychs that allow colour and gesture to unfold across expansive surfaces. Her intention is both aesthetic and experiential. Each painting becomes a moment of reflection, encouraging reconnection with the rhythms of life. Her work sits between abstraction, meditation and environmental awareness, speaking to emotional and ecological consciousness.
